Talk by Martin Schuler, prof hon EPFL

at La Longeraie, Morges

Iceland is a Nordic island country of Europe located in the North Atlantic Ocean. It has a population of 332,529 and an area of 103,000 km² (40,000 sq mi), making it the most sparsely populated country in Europe. The capital and largest city is Reykjavík. Reykjavík and the surrounding areas in the southwest of the country are home to over two-thirds of the population.

Iceland is volcanically and geologically active.

Martin Schuler, geographer and urban planner, wrote his master's thesis in 1971 on migrations of the inhabitants of North-West Iceland. At different periods of his professional life, he continued his studies in demographic history in this country. He will be speaking in French, with slides adapted for English. His talk will focus on three themes for which Iceland is known around the world: geology and volcanism, language and literature, and the history of housing in this wild and wonderful country.
